

Sideways School

(A Sideways stories from wayside school parody)

I give all credit to Louis Sachar.

By Logan Latham

Mr. Rogers

Mr. Rogers was a nice teacher but everyone was scared of him. Probably because they all thought he was a warlock. Why did they think that? No one really knows. Maybe it is because he dressed like a warlock for halloween. Mr Rogers taught the 50th story of Sideways School. It was weird though because there is no 50th floor. The person who made it only put in 49th. So I guess he doesn't exist.

Ms. Blossom

Ms. Blossom was a nice teacher, she taught on the 49th floor. Since the kids on the 50th floor's teacher didn't exist they were moved to be in Ms. Blossom's class. They never had a teacher before but they decided to give it a try. Ms. Blossom never had students before and she was scared of how they may act. When she entered the room she saw everyone sitting quietly reading. She thought "hmm... aren't 1st graders usually crazy? Well it doesn't matter. I guess I should be happy". She sat down at her desk and announced to everyone that her name was Ms. Blossom and that they could keep reading for about 10 more minutes. Once the 10 minutes was over she started teaching them. They started by the whole class reading a book called bob goes boo. Everyone was confused why they were reading a book that they read when they were

5. It didn't take long for Joe to realize she thought they were younger then they were so he raised his hand to let her know. "Yes Joe" said Ms. Blossom "umm... I don't know how to tell you this but we're 6th graders..." Joe spoke "Oh" and replied Ms. Blossom "Are you sure?" "Yes," replied Joe. "Oh well then I guess we should start doing something challenging. Everyone open your text books and read tell you get to page 132." Then she handed out text books for everyone. "I wish you didn't tell her" whispered Todd who sat right next to Joe.

Joe

Joe was a nice kid but he was really strict about the rules, one broken rule and Joe would let the teacher know what you did and get your name written on the black board under the word Punish. Joe really liked basketball and never had time to play it because he was always telling people. Most people didn't like Joe because he tattled so much so he had no friends.

Alexander

Alexander was a normal kid and did very normal things. Except that he is still on the 50th story.

Fred

Fred loved work he would beg to work he loved work so much that he would skip recess so he could do math. The only problem of loving to do work is the teachers might make you do their taxes because you seem so smart. If Fred isn't good at something then he will become good at it. He has an A++ on everything but sports. Fred doesn't like sports, he prefers work. Everyone is always trying to make Fred do sports but he never will. He says it is a "waste of time” and he will never play sports. One day in Ms. Blossom’s class on the 49th floor he was told by Ms. Blossom that if he didn’t start to play sports he would get an F in P.E. He thought he would be fine but little did he know that P.E was a requirement to move on to 7th grade. So Fred decided to try basketball just like Joe. Well after the first day of playing he was already kicked off the basketball team because he couldn’t throw or catch. He asked Joe for help but he said that he can’t because he is too busy telling on people. And that was the end of Fred trying. I guess I will just have to do 6th grade again, he thought.

Todd

Todd was very honest. He liked being trusted. Todd’s favorite subject was writing, he was good at writing. When it was time to write he would always be the first to finish and he would always get a great grade. One day when he finished writing he turned it in and Ms. Blossom was shocked. He did horrible things, he forgot to capitalize, he was writing gibberish and his writing was impossible to understand. He was confused, he normally did good. He went down the stairs to the playground to talk to the yard teacher Louis, Louis was loved by the children of Sideways School. He told Dan about the situation, and asked him for help. He asked Todd to say his abc’s. He did, however, he said them wrong. “A,E,F,R,G,D” “No, no, no, you’re doing it all wrong.”, “You count A,B,C,D,E,F not A,E,F,R,G,D” He looked confused. Louis retaught Todd the abc’s and Todd went back to class, rewrote his essay and all was well.

The End

Sideways School Book 1 (A Short book series)