

R/EntitledParents Stories

NOTE: This book is intended for humans over the age of 12, reading when under age could be inappropriate i am not responsible for anything you learn - Author

Table Of Contents

1. My mother has ruined every birthday I have had since I was 10yo and wonders why I don't invite friends over
2. EPs get mad at us because daughter kicked out of summer camp
3. My mom locked me out of my steam account because "I'm addicted to video games"
4. EM gets mad at me after I slapped her son for looking up my skirt
5. Entitled Aunt Questions if it's REALLY MY BIRTHDAY

My mother has ruined every birthday I have had since I was 10yo and wonders why I don't invite friends over

Ok so I'm going to mention the two worst occurrences of my mother ruining my birthday, my 10th birthday and my 15th

10th- We were going to these gardens to walk around and I was incredibly excited to go, it ended up raining and I got really upset that I couldn't go, none of my family tried to make me feel better and when we came up with an alternate plan, my mother spent the whole day sulking about the fact I got upset, by sulking i mean she didn't talk to me for the whole day, didn't participate in anything we did and decided to have a shout at my whole family before going to bed at 5pm, to reiterate my grown adult mother decided to ignore her ten year old daughter on her birthday because she didn't feel like trying to make the best out of the plans changing

15th- I have quite a few friends who are a part of the LGBT community and use they/them pronouns, before they came over on my birthday, I tried to explain to my mother this and she didn't really understand so I explicitly asked her not to mention it because she doesn't really understand their situations. When my friends arrived and we sat down to eat, my mother came up to my friends and gave her entire opinion on their sexualities even after I asked her to leave it a few hours before, she didn't give them any chance to help her learn more and instead said that none of anything they say matters and it means nothing to her. This entire time I look physically upset and after I finish my food I go up to my room. My mother comes up and shouts at me in front of my friends calling me an attention seeker for being upset because I am in my room crying. I try to explain that it's due to how uncomfortable and embarrassed I felt because of her but she says she didn't do anything wrong and I'm just trying to get attention. One of the friends speaks for me and gives my mother an out to this situation so we can end it (your generation might not understand and that's fine) she gets extremely offended and says that this was incredibly disrespectful to her even though she has used that excuse multiple times in other situations. After that, my friends look after me and 10 minutes later my mother asks to see me and decides to cry at me with my friends one door away. She cries and shouts that I should have been on her side and defended her. Since this, she has never apologized for anything that happened and believes she is in the right.

EPs get mad at us because daughter kicked out of summer camp

This story is from the summer of 2021. I (23m) work at an outdoor summer camp, students stay here for most of the summer, we have cabins, and do outdoor activities but we also have artsy stuff and other indoor activities for the less sporty kids, or if a kid just doesn't want to participate in a certain event they come, stuff like trivia and making bracelets.

We often have siblings, one of the set of siblings we had this year was a 13 year old boy and his 14 year old sister. The boy was very energetic, very sporty and while he was a lot to handle, he was extremely kind. He did all of the outdoor activities and for the camp newspaper, was one of the boys who wrote in the sports section. He had a few friends from school there as well, they were also the types of kids to cause trouble but never in a mean spirited way, just very energetic kids with a lack of common sense, but they cared deeply about everyone around them.

His sister had a polar opposite personality, she hated sports, was constantly doing the indoor actives (which is fine, I liked them a lot as a kid) and generally hated any of the antics/jokes her brother and his friends played, even though they never affected her directly, and the people whom it did, weren't actually hurt by them. She was also incredibly mean and a bully. She was also the type of kid who was great at pulling off the facade of being the sweetest, best behaved child compared to her "troublemaker" brother.

Our camp is generally pretty laid back, the man who started it and runs it is an old man, but extremely forward thinking. He's not the type to really believe in punitive punishment and we have a few counselors trained in working with children, especially in restorative practices. He is one of the best guys I have ever met. I started going to the camp when I was around 10, there only student I personally remember getting kicked out was this one boy who was a bully, kicked other kids, called names, etc. This is when we were 13, his policy allows kids to come back the next year if kicked out. The boy had shitty, emotionally abusive parents, and after a legal battle, sometime between those summers, his grandparents got custody of him. He came back a much better person and is currently someone who I talk to about once a month, he's doing great and is in law school.

This girl was easily one of the meanest people I have ever met, and it's hard to believe her and her brother are siblings. She got in trouble for the first time a few days into the camp, she was being mean to an incredibly smart autistic boy, the boy loves science and was talking to her about science he finds interesting. She was calling him a nerd and a loser, the boy came up to us after he was done talking to her and reported it. The girl was also smart and calculated, she thought she could get away with it because the boy was autistic and knew he'd be less likely to report. One of her brother's friends from school basically told me that she was extremely good at manipulating teachers and got away with bullying frequently because of it. He also said that she absolutely loathed her brother and saw him as stupid and annoying. A few days later, the girl was in trouble again, this time for bullying her brother and his friends for their platonic intimacy. They told each other they loved each other, cuddled and even kissed. The boys have such a close bond, there were only a few times I didn't see them together. She was going around calling them gay and the f slur to different kids. She then was gossiping about them with a boy she didn't know was gay, he reported it.

There were a few other instances (including mocking a boy who was 14 and just became a teen dad, talking about how he missed his son), but the final straw was when she was mocking her brother for having a crush on a girl, who happened to be trans. She definitely was cis passing if she needed to be, but our camp has always been very accepting of LGBT people and she chose to be openly trans. It was obvious that he had a crush on her when I was overlooking them at dinner and he invited her to their table and was blushing when talking to her. I was managing the cabin where these boys slept so I overheard them telling him he needs to make a move and ask her out. He did and she agreed to go on a "date" with him. His sister was again, calling him gay for this and was being transphobic. She refused to apologize and doubled down.

We called her parents and the exchange picking her up went like this (EM- entitled mother, D- one of the directors)

EM- why are you kicking my kids out

D- as we explained in our phone call, your daughter has been bullying other children and has been causing trouble, your son is more than welcome to stay

EM- she wouldn't do that, I think you're confusing her with my son, little shit always causes trouble

D- I will get some of the counselors if you need proof, but it was your daughter, she was bullying her brother and friends for their friendship and calling them homophobic names. your son for a crush and a guy for being a teen dad

EM- my daughter wouldn't do that, one of her best friends is a gay guy, and maybe that guy shouldn't have been sleeping around

D- one of your sons friends also said she calls him stupid and annoying, she was ruthlessly mean to your son

EM- did she lie? All he cares about is sports over school, he did well in school but he won't be able to do that in high school next year, he thinks he's so funny being the class clown

D- whatever your son may have done to misbehave at school, it doesn't change the fact your daughter is a bully, she is welcome back next year if she changes her ways, we have tried talking to her with counselors before but she has shown no signs of improvement

EM- forget about it, c'mon (daughters name), I'm sorry (sons name) was being an ass

as she leaves she says she's going to leave a bad review and file a lawsuit for discrimination

The next day, her father calls the camp and tries to shame the counselors talking about how great his daughter is and how we plotted against her, when mentioned her calling him gay he said "we'd love our child no less if he was gay, we have a gay nephew his age who's funny and kind and who's boyfriend is great, he says she'd never bully her", he also questioned why a girl would agree to go out with him

My heart just goes out to her son, it's very clear which child is the golden child. The mom and dad were both entitled parents who saw their daughter as angelic and their son as horrible because he's a bit of a troublemaker. He's so sweet though. He kept mentioning about how he wanted to be a sports journalist when he grows up, registration for the camp started mid last month and he's already signed up, his sister isn't. I honestly wonder if they just want to get rid of him for the summer though.

My mom locked me out of my steam account because “I’m addicted to video games”

First of all I play maybe 5 hours A WEEK tops. She blames basically everything on me playing those games when I rarely even have the time to play them in the first place. She already locked me out of my Nintendo account a few years ago but my pc games are more important. I'm seriously depressed and frankly those games are the only thing that keep me sane/give me the smallest amount of joy in my life (other than my pet which she's ALSO THREATENED TO GET RID OF). I know it sounds childish but they mean the world to me and I just don't know what to do anymore. Kinda just needed to vent this bc I'm having a mental breakdown rn sorry.

EM gets mad at me after I slapped her son for looking up my skirt

So I (16f) was walking at a park near my house. Since it was finally starting to warm up I decided to wear a skirt for the first time since like October. So I passed the playground and as I was walking away I hear someone running up behind me, as I'm walking out of the corner of my eye I see two hands grab the sides of my skirt and lift it completely exposing my panties. As soon as this happens I turn around and without hesitation backhand the person holding my skirt. Then I realize that it was some kid who looked to be 10 or 11. He looked pretty shocked that I slapped him. But before I could ask him "what the hell" this kid's mom who we'll call Karen comes running out of nowhere and slaps me across the face and starts yelling at me. The conversation went like this Karen-"HOW DARE YOU!" Me-"ow what the hell" Karen-" don't you ever dare touch my baby" Me-" how bout you teach your "baby" to not be a perv" Karen (slaps me again) "don't you ever talk to me or my son like that, he's just being curious, boys will be boys" Me-"ow it's not being curious it's sexual assault" Karen-" maybe if you weren't dressed like a slut (I just wearing a skirt that was one hand above my knee and a t-shirt) he wouldn't get so curious" Me-" maybe if you taught your crotch goblin how to respect women he wouldn't be looking up skirts" Karen-" where are your parents I doubt they let you leave the house looking like a slut" Me-" yeah I think that's what my parents would get mad about, the way I'm dressed and not that your son lifted my skirt"

With that Karen got her son and left saying " let's leave we don't talk to whores like her" and so I flipped her off as we both walked away. I wish there was a more satisfying ending to this but unfortunately, that's just how life goes

*sorry for the awful formatting I wrote this on mobile *

Entitled Aunt Questions if it's REALLY MY BIRTHDAY

This is a story my Mom has told me quite often about my Aunt aka her sister-in-law who is quite frankly just as entitled as my other Aunt. For Context, My younger sister and I were both adopted from China and there is not that much information on us before that aside from what the adoption agency told my Mom, so therefore, some information is hypothesized.

(As always, We'll be using Pokemon character names for everyone for privacy and to keep things light-hearted)

The Cast:

Cynthia: My Mom

Dawn: Me

Opal: Grandmother

Trip: Uncle

Georgia: EP/Aunt/ Trip's Wife

Lana, Chloe, and Bonnie: Cousins/Possible EKs

So at the time, I was about Seven or eight. My mom had decided to throw a party for that Birthday at the American Girl store. Grandma Opal, Uncle Trip, Aunt Georgia, and my cousins were all invited. From what I remember it was a good time. Myself, Lana, Chloe, and Bonnie all brought our dolls and we were supposedly just talking.

Later my Aunt said this: "Cynthia, are you REALLY sure it's Dawn's Birthday today?"

Understandably, my Mom looked pretty puzzled. The documents say I was found on the 23rd of July and my Birthday is the 21st (at two days old) so the logic added up. In the end, Mom told me that Aunt Georgia kept trying To make her daughters the center of attention throughout the evening and we ended up just not inviting them to any events like that again..